

ENTERTAINMENT

Maheno painting created especially for Anzac Day

22nd Mar 2015 4:59 AM

Owen Pointon's painting, titled Dingoes Guard the Wreck, is on display at Happy Valley Resort on Fraser Island.

A PAINTING by a renowned artist, titled Dingoes Guard the Wreck, is featured in a special Anzac Day display at Happy Valley Resort on Fraser Island.

Wildlife artist Owen Pointon said the painting was created especially for Anzac Day.

"The ship featured is the S.S. Maheno, which was actually a hospital ship for the New Zealand Armed Forces at Gallipoli," Mr Pointon said.

"Plus, of course, the Fraser Island dingoes are symbolic of the island.

"They're magnificent creatures."

Owen Pointon's work will be on regular display at the Visitors Centre from now on.

TOP STORIES ONLINE

1. Champion skydiver remains critical following fatal accident
2. Dalby woman woke to sounds of neighbouring house on fire
3. Toddler allegedly bashed by father dies in hospital
4. Serial stalker accused ex-boss of being lesbian
5. Mum cons money from woman with dead baby sob story

Recommended for you

Some voters now

LIVE: Early swings in place for

Recommended by

© The Maryborough Hervey Bay Newspaper Company Pty Ltd 2015. Unauthorised reproduction is prohibited under the laws of Australia and by international treaty.